Health Research Repository Now Available to the Memorial University Community

The Health Sciences Library has created the Health Research Repository to support Memorial University health researchers with publicly disseminating and preserving their publications AND complying with the Open Access requirements of research funding organizations such as CIHR. Other benefits include:

- increased impact through Open Access to the publications
- the ability to create a permanent URL for the submitted works that can be used for linking from CVs, course materials, and web sites
- publications are retrievable through Google and other popular Internet search engines

All archived publications will be located within the Health Research Repository collection of the Digital Archive Initiative. A Creative Commons Canada license is used to permit public access to the repository publications while maintaining copyright for copyright holders. Submission to the repository is open to faculty, students or staff of Memorial who are involved with any aspect of research or publishing relevant to the Health Sciences.

To find out more about how to submit publications to the Health Research Repository or view the publications in the repository visit the repository web site at <http://www.med.mun.ca/ResearchRepo/home.aspx> or contact the Health Sciences Library Information Desk, hsinfo@mun.ca, phone: 777-6672
